

Share Your Story

Help Raise Awareness of ATTR Amyloidosis

Radcliffe Medical Education are producing a documentary about ATTR amyloidosis, a condition that is often underdiagnosed and mistaken for other causes of heart disease or ageing.

We are inviting patients to take part in a short Zoom interview to explore sharing their experience in this documentary, with the selection of up to three patients for on-camera filming.

We Are Looking for Participants Who:

- Have ATTR cardiac symptoms with/without other symptoms such as neuropathic or musculoskeletal
- Experienced delays or misdiagnosis
- Were affected by the long search for answers

What Can They Expect?

- An initial Zoom conversation (informal and confidential)
- Interviews and documentary conducted in English

Why Patient Voices Matter

Including patient perspectives is central to this documentary.

Your story can help to:

- Raise awareness
- Reduce delays in diagnosis
- Raise awareness of ATTR

To learn more, please email: federica.zurletti@radcliffe-group.com

Your experience could help others receive answers sooner.